Classic Appeal for

Rough Sawn and Hand Split: Two profiles to suit your preferences

Royal Designer Shake comes in two distinctive profiles. Rough Sawn provides a refined look, with a 7 1/2" exposure, a uniform surface, and a straight bottom edge for a subtle shadow line.

Hand Split provides an incredibly natural and rustic look, with a 9" exposure, a variably grained surface, and an uneven bottom edge for a strong shadow line. The former is the epitome of contemporary elegance, while the latter is reminiscent of the hand-split cedar shakes of a bygone era.

Both panels' deeply molded woodgrain texture and low-gloss finish look virtually identical to the genuine article. Because they are extra-thick and have built-in ribs for added strength and rigidity, the panels go on flat. The strong construction also means that the panels will withstand Mother Nature's extreme weather conditions, from pelting rain and gail-force winds in summer to snow and ice in winter.

Rough Sawn and Hand Split feature a molded perimeter locking system that facilitates installation and results in a clean, natural appearance. And with Royal Designer Shake, there's no painting and virtually no maintenance required to retain the cladding's enduring aesthetic appeal.
